SNHP - State National Harmonization Program

The Oregon potato industry has been participating with the State National Harmonization Program (SNHP) for several years now. This SNHP for seed potatoes specifies minimum phytosanitary standards to enhance uniformity and quality in seed potatoes shipped between states and enhance international marketing of quality seed potatoes exported from the U.S. The requirements for participants include minimum standards set by State regulatory authorities for certification of seed potatoes to facilitate interstate shipment, export and cooperation in pest management. The Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) was created in 2006 to be signed by every potato seed growing state and the USDA APHIS program. To be fully implemented it takes 70% of all US potato seed producing states as signatory to the MOU.

In 2006, with the cooperation of Oregon Department of Agriculture (ODA), Oregon State University (OSU) and Oregon Seed Certification, OPC supported signing the MOU that required an approved manual of how Oregon would implement the standards. The Oregon manual was the

Pacific Northwest Potatoes in Macau Wine & Gourmet Food Show

Chef Leif Eric Benson discusses potatoes with the President of Macau.

Oregon and Washington Potato Commissions represented the Pacific Northwest at the 2010 Wine & Gourmet food show in Macau, China October 28-30. The Chair of the OPC Trade committee, Nels Iverson and his wife Patti helped set-up and run the booth. Fresh potatoes were displayed all over the booth and used in demonstrations by Chef Leif Eric Benson, OPC Public Member. Overall, the USA Pacific Northwest Potato booth received a great deal of attention from the attendees.

Bill Brewer, Nels Iverson and Leif Benson also met with officials from the USDA Agricultural Trade Office and several gourmet food industry professionals before and after the show. The Executive Chef at the esteemed Venetian Resort provided the Oregon team a tour of the hotel's behind-the-scene dining operations.

first in the US to be approved and signed by ODA Director Katy Coba in 2007. Since that time other states have been added to the MOU. Currently the last three states' manuals needed to reach the 70% state involvement are being completed. Have you seen the new Oregon Potato Spokes Spud?

Rosso Bambino in the "Dig This" Potato Festival parade - Merrill, Rosso Bambino is the new OPC mascot that delivers a message for more than 120 commercial potato farms in Oregon that produce 2 billion pounds of potatoes each year.

The Oregon Potato Commission (OPC) released a new baby red potato character to help promote the great taste and high nutritional value of Oregon potatoes. A contest was used by the OPC Consumer Research and Education Committee to determine the new tubers name. Haley Hamilton an eleven year old Sherwood, Oregon student submitted the winning name, Rosso Bambino, to Radio Disney for consideration.

Haley was awarded a family vacation package to Disneyland for her winning name. Since Rosso Bambino's name selection he met Haley at Baggenstos

Farms on Roy Rogers Road, Sherwood, to thank her for submitting his name. He also rode on a potato harvester operated by Jim Carleton, during the Merrill, Oregon Potato Festival Parade, helped start the Columbia River Power Marathon at Umatilla, Oregon and guided children to the Oregon Commodity booth at the Oregon State Fair in Salem.

Rosso's future plans include participation in the Oregon Child Nutrition Program school events and the Radio Disney Kids Club events and grocery store appearances. He will educate children (and their parents) of the nutritional values of potatoes and provide some Oregon potato industry facts of interest.
